

Chikara is a promotion based mainly in Pennsylvania. This promotion is heavily based around the lucha libre influence for example the babyfaces are known as tecnico's and heel's known as rudo's.

The rules of Chikara are:

There is a twenty count on the floor.

In tag team and multi man tag team matches if a competitor rolls out of the ring onto the floor it counts as a legal tag.

Also, in tag team or multi man tag team matches more than one competitor can be pinned or be in a submission hold.

If a tag partner or opponent can't make the show for any reason a suitable replacement will be found by a fair way in the form of a wrestler's name/s being drawn out of a hat.

If a competitor removes a mask wrestlers mask or a competitor is more concerned in hurting their opponent rather than pinning them (known as Excesivo de castigo) it will be an automatic disqualification.

As this promotion is based on a "family friendly" environment there is no profanity allowed by either the fans (also known as the Chikarmy) or by the Chikara locker room. If a member of the Chikara roster breaks this then they will not be asked back to the promotion.

¹⁵ The rules of the Cibernetico as follow:

1. Lucha tags are in effect but also tradition tags are allowed.
2. Each team are consisted by eight chikara roster members in a batting order which must be followed. Which means only the next person in the batting order can be on the ring apron and IF the batting order is broken it can result in a disqualification. It be the only time that names won't be in alphabetical but batting order.
3. Elimination can occur via Pinfall, Submission, Disqualification or Count Out.
4. There could only be one winner (so for example if one has been eliminated but the other have three other members surviving those three would face off to see who will become the winner of the Cibernetico).
